Art. 560

§1 If the sold item is defective, the purchaser may submit a declaration on price reduction or withdrawal from the agreement, unless the seller immediately and without excessive nuisance for the purchaser replaces the defective item with an item free from defects or removes the defect. This limitation shall not apply where the item has already been replaced or repaired by the seller or the seller did not meet the obligation of replacement with a defect-free item or of defect removal.

§2 If a consumer is the purchaser, he may, instead of the defect removal proposed by the seller, demand that the item be replaced with an item free from defects or instead of replacement of the item, demand that the defect be removed, unless causing the item to be compliant with the agreement in a manner chosen by the purchaser is impossible or would require excessive costs compared to the manner proposed by the seller. When assessing the excess of costs, the value of the defect-free item, type and importance of the defect discovered are taken into consideration, as well as the inconvenience to which a different manner of satisfaction would expose the purchaser.

§3 The reduced price should remain in such proportion to the price resulting from the agreement, in which the value of the defective item remains to the value of the defect-free item.

§4 The purchaser may not withdraw from the agreement if the defect is minor.

Art. 561

§1 If the sold item is defective, the purchaser may demand the replacement of the item with a defect-free item or defect removal.

§2 The seller is obligated to replace the defective item to a defect-free item or to remove the defect within a reasonable period of time without excessive nuisance to the purchaser.

§3 The seller may refuse to satisfy the demand of the purchaser if the achievement of the compliance of the defective item with the agreement in the manner chosen by the purchaser is not possible or, in comparison with the second possible manner of bringing to compliance with the agreement, it would require excessive costs (...)
